JOHN C. CLARK IS NO MORE. This excellen honorable, and generous gentleman, "sleeps the last sleep of death." Our heart bleeds as v announce the melancholy intelligence. Mr. Clark was a lawyer of learning and distinction. For several years he represented the "Chemung dis trict" of New York in the House of Representa tives of the United States; and at the time of hi demise he was the Solicitor of the United States Treasury. Whilst on a visit to his residence in Chemung county, New York, he was suddenly attacked by a disease which speedily terminate his valuable life. Our deceased friend had troops of admirers and friends in this city, all of whom will be greatly shocked at receiving this afflicting intelligence. He was a man of enlarged powers o mind, to which was superadded a generous, noblsoul. Hearts will bleed and tears freely flow, when this sad bereavement becomes known to his numerous friends. We drop the tear of respect and affection to the memory of the Hon. John C.

The Hour and the Man!

In seven days from the present, a Republic of nearly twenty-five millions of people will declare its choice of a chief ruler for the period of four years from the 4th day of March next. There will be a bloodless contest for this station between two parties very equally arrayed. Such a contest, so conducted, has seldom been witnessed by the world-so peaceful, so universally understood in all its nature and effects, and so deliberate and orderly in its conduct. Patriotism valor, honor, and religious zeal have often in fluenced the actions of men in the choice of politica rulers; but the true republicanism taught and urged by the Book of Divine Revelation has neve before so guided into the paths of wisdom an peace the progress of a great nation. Religion's name has been used to give sanction to the impious assumption of "the Divine right of Kings," while the plain truths of Holy Writ, teaching "PEACE AND GOOD WILL AMONG MEN," have been overlooked and forgotten.

In the prospect of this national contest we re joice. We regard it as a precious privilege to live under the protection of a government so constituted; and we call upon every American citizen to reflect upon the responsibilities resting upon him. His birthright is of precious value, and he cannot forfeit it without guilt and ingratitude.

Two candidates are presented for our election One of them is a gentleman of fair abilities, and much beloved by the friends who have known him in the limited sphere of his past position. He is an avowed and recognized member of the Democratic party. He is known to be opposed to the principle of protecting the industry of our own country from the competition of the cheaper labor of others, and to the improvement of the great channels of commerce by the fostering care of the government. The other is a citizen who, as a warrior, has won renown for his country wherever her name is known, and as an adept in interna tional law, diplomacy, and administrative ability, has earned a proud distinction on the scroll of fame His name has for ferty years been as familiar a a household word in every homestead in the land. He is a man of pure life, of unblemished honor of noble impulses, and of peculiarly national views upon every subject essential to the welfare of his country. Born and educated in the sunny South, familiar with the North by the intercourse and service of years, accustomed to reflect upon all subjects with reference to their nations importance solely, it is impossible that he can limit his sympathies to any section of the Union. He is moreover deeply interested in the preservation and improvement of every acre of land in our wide domain, and deeply anxious that thrift and industry shall open the avenues of commerce to all portions of our country by means of river and harbor improvements, railroads, and canals as well as by inducing the establishment of manu factories in every section. To the promotion of these ends he will devote his energies by al means within the constitutional powers of the government.

The policy of our Government, the gratification of the national pride, the manifestation of becoming gratitude, and the principles of common justice, cencur in invoking our suffrages for this great and good man, and we firmly and conscientiously believe that the verdict of the American people will accord with these injunctions.

We invoke every Whig, by every sentiment that endears to his heart's affections the land of his birth, the land consecrated by the bleed of Winfield Scott, to perform the sacred duty now devolving upon him-to go up to the ballot-box on the day of the election, and to deposit his vote as conscience and duty shall dictate.

We also invoke every Whig, by his regard for his country's weal, to exert all the influence h possesses in inducing the performance of this important duty by every voter within the range of his observation. Let no sentinel of liberty sleep upon his post. The issue is important. Ou fellow-citizens of the other party are active, energetic, and vigilant. They are working under the prestige of successes in certain recent State elections; and they are aided by the cheers, encouragement, and, as we believe, the pecuniary aid, of an unscrupulous money aristocracy i England, that is striving to crush the industrial enterprise of this country, that their own manufacturing and shipping interests may prosper. The contest is between American and British policy. Our candidate is disposed to be liberal just, and friendly toward other powers; but he will not assent to a system that will sacrifice the interests of any portion of our own country, even though it should tend to win the favor of all the rest of the human family. Let this be remembered. Let Scott, GRAHAM, and AMERICAN IN. TERESTS be the watchwords of our party, and victory will soon sit gaily upon our banners!

The Scientific American gives a new cure for hiccoughs. Raise one or both hands high above your head. It is said to be a certain remedy.

The Jacksil Press. The most powerful argument of the Washing on Union at this moment, and that upon which harps with the keenest relish, is the editors pe that sufficient honors will not be paid b he Whigs to the illustrious subject of long year slander and vituperation by the conductors at Billingsgate chronicle. Mr. Webster is no yet in his grave, but the Union, with the sharp ent of the jackall, snuffs at the fresh turf in he hope of sating its unnatural and ferociou ppetite. Neither a sentiment of respect for him whom its barbed and malignant shafts have so ong been hurled in vain, nor a conscieusness of name for its outrage upon all the dictates of ropriety and decency, can restrain that slimy lodder in the turbid and fetid sinks of low parisanship and scurrility. The Union and its ight regular and countless irregular editors ave now, we hope, attained to a climax in their frantic efforts to vilify the Whig party and its distinguished leaders. Daniel Webster has fer any years been honored by the Whigs of this epublic; he has long been defended by then from the envious and unscrupulous assaults of the Union and its unprincipled compeers; he has long shared, through good and evil report, the ortunes of that party; his virtues and his vices (for who has them not?) have long been wel known to that party. Living, he was ever honored by it; dying, he is regretted; and through all future time his name and his fame will be inked and associated with it; and when the greatest intellect of our country in this era shall e spoken of, his adherence to Whig principle will be the boast of that party. If an hour has er existed in which a transient alienation of mpathy has arisen, it will be but as a mote in the eam to intercept the glory of that shining orb. That he did not live a Whig, and that hi leath is not lamented by the Whig party as a rievous bereavement, are tales told by an ennomed, a bitter, and a truthless foe, who would

Even Locofoco vituperation dared not assai he fame of this noble old patriot in the hour political quiet; and were he to be withdrawn rom the field of political competition, the first to rumpet his praises would be the mercenar throng by whom he is now assailed. In 1838, Mr. Thomas Ritchie pronounced the following ribute in the Richmond Enquirer:

"There is so much of noble generosity of char acter about Scott, independent of his skill and bravery as a soldier, that his life has really been ne of romantic beauty and interest. collect his conduct when on his way to take command of the army engaged in the Black Hawl war. The corps he had with him were all strick-en down with the chelera, before he joined Gen Atkinson. What was his conduct? Did he the team to their fate, and fly to the army of the gallant and accomplished Atkinson, his warm personal friend, in order that he might snatch from him the laurels for which he had toiled so long, and which he was just then on the point of winning? No! he clung to his sick soldiers dwing all eround him with the dreadful diers, dying all around him with the dreadfu pestilence, and exerted himself day and nigh to save them from the grave—to the imminer mand of the army—it was his right. But be hold his magnanimity! In this scene of Genera Scott's life, he shines more brilliantly, in my estimation, than in the most glorious battle he er fought."

The Forgery Clinched! LEBANON, OHIO,

To the Editors of the National Intelligencer: GENTLEMEN: In the Washington Union of the 15th October there is an article headed "General ott and the Abolitioniets-the Whig candidate fe Scott and the Aboutionets—the wing candidate fer the repeal of the Fugitive Slave Law"—the design of which is to prove, by a base forgery, on the al-leged authority of the Hon. L. D. Campbell, that "Gen. Scott is in favor of the repeal of the fuitive slave bill, and that he would if elec-President of the United States, sign a law for its eal." From this editorial of the Union I make following extract:

[It is here given.] Now, Messrs. Editors, I am the editor of the Lebanon Star, and pronounce the concluding paragraph of the above letter an interpolation by the editor of the Union; or, in plain phrase, an infamous forgery, got up by him, on the eve of the election, to injure Gen. Scott at the South The first paragraph contains the whole of Mr Campbell's letter, as published in the Star o August 6, 1852, a copy of which I send you marked for your inspection. Yours, &c. W. H. P. DENNY.

Several Loco papers of the lower stratum ave got up an immensely interesting story to the effect that $200,000 have been gathered together by the Whigs for the purpose of carrying th State of Pennsylvania for Scott and Graham We are so used to Locofoco fictions, or Unionism that we don't regard them or their effects as ser ious matters; but this one thing is very certainwe are going to carry Pennsylvania!

A good Appointment. The Secretary of the Treasury has appointed CHARLES LE BARON, esq., superintendent for the erection of the new custom-house at Mobile Alabama.

Mr. Le Baron is known to us as a gentleman of great worth, and is held in high esteem by his ellow-citizens of Mobile. The appointment is a nost judicious one.

ACCIDENT.—Yesterday while Mr. Gallaher, editor of the Charlestown Free Press, was riding down Bridge street his horse stumbled and fell. Mr. Gallaher was thrown against the pavement with such force as to injure one of his legs and portions of his body very badly. He was taken into the drug store of Dr. Sothoron, near the market, where every possible assistance was rendered him.

In no portion of the surrounding country has the march of improvement been more rapid, during the last few years than in old Mont-gomery county, Maryland. Mr. Aquilla Eld sold, on Saturday last, his farm, lying a few miles beyond Tennallytown, which cost him five years ago less than $500, for $1,600. We hear of another, near the same place, which cost the present owner a few years past $16 per acre, for which he has been offered $50 per acre, but re-fused.
